He graduated from Hilldale High School in 2000 where he played basketball and thought he was the best player ever. Ashley loved to watch football and was a dedicated Texas Longhorn fan and would always look forward to the Red River Rivalry because his family were Oklahoma Sooner fans. He enjoyed hanging out with his friends. He liked to watch Game of Thrones, Big Bang Theory and his most favorite, Reservation Dogs.

“ Ashley was a big part of my life at just the right time...middle school & high school. As we all know that time can be a huge culture shock and our influences/mentors at that time can really dictate the kind of person you will become later in life. Ashley took me under his wing and always looked out for me for which I am forever grateful and will never forget him for that. He taught me a lot and really help me develop more confidence (which luckily he had some to spare, haha!) that has gone on to impact my entire adult life. We had a ton of fun, got into a good deal of trouble, and created some great memories together. He will be greatly missed.

“ Ashley was never one to conform, if the whole world new Jordan was the greatest player on the plant Ashley would say Scotty was carrying him. Everyone was pulling for OU so he just became a Texas fan.....you know I always respected that. I probably spent more of my time growing up with him and a couple other friends than anyone. As we got older we saw each other less and less. He was never a big touchy feely person, nor am I. He'd always be a little stand offish if I hadn't seen him in awhile, so I'd always just go up and give him a hug, then it was like no time had passed. You know I'm thinking we were wrong about that, I'll be giving a lot more hugs going forward. My mom always said Ashley ran like a deer, so in 2nd grade I raced him anytime, but I could never quite beat him. I know one thing, next time we meet I want another shot. I probably won't catch him, but when he stops running, he's got a hug coming.

Love you brother Aaron.
