“Memories of Carole Wilson give me so much joy. She was a lovely lady with a special soul. Her friendship with her best friend Maudie, taught me how dear true friendship could be. She and Maudie shared many joyous experiences together. The sixteen years of knowing Carole was like an old melody of years ago. That may seem like a strange way to express knowing someone, but she was so knowledgeable about past and present life circumstances, that it just seemed melodious. She wore her age so gracefully in everything she did.

When I would pick her up on Saturday mornings to go garage selling, she would have a twinkle in her eyes just like it was Christmas morning! She used to tell me that there would be no Christmas or birthday gifts if it were not for garage and estate sales. I never took it to heart that she lived off very little money. God was merciful towards her when He provided a job at the Veteran’s Affairs Regional Office, where she could put money back for retirement. Because God showed His love towards her I believe there was not a living thing that she did not love nor appreciate.

Carole had the most beautiful flowers even in the brutal Oklahoma summertime. I always told her she needed a garden gate where people could stop by and talk to her. She had the tidiest flower garden, where she worked very hard to keep up. Not much of a vegetable garden, because the flowers would take over and she held her flowers in the highest esteem! She was the best cook and entertainer ever! She would toil over holiday meals and desserts for her loved ones, and thoroughly enjoy doing it. It was really hard to get a recipe out of her, I tried on several occasions to get her to show me how she made Pecan Tassies, but to no avail. She would say, “Kid just get in the kitchen and do it.”

Her sparkling blue eyes shining, that’s how I will always remember her. I loved her so and she was a special friend.

To her sons,

Death is not the end, for love goes on and you will find evidence long after she has gone. Keith, the flowers that she tended will blossom without end and you will find her in their beauty. Mike, the books you sent her, which brought laughter and enjoyment within their pages will continue to give pleasure to you throughout your life. The bond between mother and son will not end with time, it will go on for always.
