“ well, i don't do facebook anymore and I can't let her family know I'm sorry in someway other than this.

First, my absolute condolences to the family, I am sorry. I graduated high school with Kay, our class was fairly small obviously, but big for a Webbers Falls graduating class(29 kids made the annual, but i'm not sure they all walked for a diploma). Some folks wonder why, and I'm asked by my wife, why I'm interested in paying my respects to high school classmates' family on these sites and at funerals. Well, classmates in particular felt almost like siblings to me. When you attend a small school, you get know classmates really well, and most of their family as well.

I very much adored Kaye. We weren't close friends through a few years of school. But I would hope she felt in our last couple, we got some great laughs together. She was very easy to talk to, always could kid around with her. And I absolutely loved her great, great smile.

I am very broken hearted as I remember her through the yearbook. I got to chat with a fellow classmate when I learned of the news, we talked for at least an hour about how its too bad we all as a class didn't stay closer. 30 years this year since we graduated.

I would like to just leave this with a happy memory and a good vibe, so here it goes.

My facial memory of Kaye is her taking that aggressive overbite of her bottom lip as she grabs my upper arm after I've made a stupid comment(I made a bunch back then), she grabs my arm, makes that super, bony fist with her right hand and punches me as hard as she can. Then laughs as hard as she can while shaking those bony shoulders up and down. She seemed to always have a smile(unless someone was trying to take her picture when she didn't want it taken).

Thank you for reading and my God give you strength to endure.
