“ I bid a difficult and final farewell to my only sister. She taught me much in our youth. I do wonder how peoples without older siblings cope. She taught me:

1) Geography: China is opposite on the earth to the United States. She brought me a globe, taught me that it does not bounce and should not be thrown. She showed me where the U. S. and China were. Then she brought me the shovel out of my garden set and started me digging my way to China.

2) Economics: she showed me how if I took my two dollar bills and folded them I would have twice as much money.

3) Critical thinking skills: There was a single word that could lead to survival: RUN!

4) Bargaining: She taught me how to bargain at the dinner table: I YOU will give me the pulley bone, then I will be happy about it.

5) Survival skills: When you bob for apples at Halloween parties you do not have to stick you whole head under water.

Come to think of it, I do wonder if I would have made it to my seventies without her leadership. I agree with the many who have contacted me since her passing in noting that her smile and laughter will be much missed.
